This fall, Columbus State will continue to offer instruction primarily remotely, with in-person instruction limited to a small number of areas in which online instruction is insufficient. The decision to deliver instruction this way was the result of our continued determination to prioritize the health and safety of the College community.

We have already been offering very limited in-person instruction over Summer semester with appropriate safety protocols in place. These protocols, which include cleaning, physical distancing and the use of facial coverings, will continue, and will be clearly communicated to students whose classes will meet face-to-face in the fall.

The fall class schedule students review when registering is in the process of being updated to accurately reflect the way classes will be delivered. This is a complicated process that will take some time. As of now, all classes specified as "Web" on the fall course schedule will be taught entirely online, and virtual meeting expectations, if any, will be added soon. Classes identified as "Blended" that are converted to online only will have class locations removed, with any virtual meeting expectations listed. Classes that are traditionally presented in person (not designated as "Web" or "Blended") will have locations removed when converted to remote instruction and designated as "Live Online" if there are virtual meeting requirements. Locations will remain within the schedule for any in-person offerings.

We appreciate your patience as we navigate through Autumn schedule updates and encourage you to check back often as updates will be ongoing, as well as contact an advisor as you have questions. All schedule updates will be complete at the beginning of August.

Columbus State's low-density approach to Autumn semester will also include the return of limited in-person services including some Student Central functions, computer lab access, and more. We will communicate more about service delivery to students who enroll for Autumn in the coming weeks. Again, safety protocols will apply, and most services will be by-appointment.

Course registration is open for Autumn semester. Current students can register on CougarWeb. Incoming students, please visit csc.edu/getstarted for next steps.
