NURC 1001 & 1003 INFORMATION

ATTENDANCE is mandatory for this course, including the first day of class.

Failure to attend may result in the student being dropped from the class. NURC 1001 follows the guidelines from the Ohio Department of Health which regulates attendance requirements. NURC 1003 involves laboratory practice each class and failure to attend class affects the student's performance.

NURC 1001 has a health record requirement which must be completed before registration can occur.

You will not be permitted to register for the course until the health record is fully completed and received in the Health Records Office. The health requirement includes completion of:

- student health history
- physical examination within one year
- current two-step Mantoux test (TB testing).

Please begin the health record process as soon as possible, as it takes a minimum of ten days to complete. There is no health record requirement for NURC 1003.

For more information on health record requirements, please contact the Health Records Office, Union Hall, Room 132; 614-287-2450 or healthrecords@csc.edu.

When a course section is listed as filled, no more students will be added to the section due to the space requirements in the lab; please do not ask to be added into a filled course section. Continue to check the course listings on the internet to see if another student drops the course in your desired section; you could then register into that vacated position. Note that there are usually TEN or MORE sections of NURC 1001 offered each semester, in a variety of locations and time formats. NURC 1001 is offered on the main campus and at the Dublin and the Reynoldsburg sites. Please check the course schedule for all of the class offerings.
